Diana Peterfreund's Morning Glory is the novelization of the movie of the same name, written for the big screen by Aline Brosh McKenna. It's obvious from the start that Peterfreund, a successful novelist, is working within someone else's parameters - and that's what makes this one so tough to review.

Okay, release day plus one. What can I say, I'm a little distracted these days. Anyway, yesterday marks the release of my seventh novel, MORNING GLORY, the story of a plucky television news producer and the dueling co-anchors she must wrangle if she wants her show to survive. This book was so much fun to write. I loved doing a novelization, of figuring out how to take someone else's ...
